Whereby

What it does:

Helps people connect over video for a world in which anywhere works.

What to use it for:

Nice for one on one meetings if your company doesn't have an enterprise video conferencing tool.

RecruiterHunt

What it does:

Recruiter Hunt is an online database of hundreds of tools, apps and websites for recruiters.

The upvoting feature makes it a community for sharing.

What to use it for:

In need of a new tool to support or refresh an existing workflow? Start on the Collections page to view the vast assortment of recruiting and sourcing related tools.

Koalender

What it does:

Eliminates the back and forth of meeting scheduling.

What to use it for:

Scheduling calls with internal and external partners.

NameDrop

What it does:

Makes it easy for you to share your name with the world, in your own voice. Simply record your name as it's meant to be said, and get your personal name link.

What to use it for:

Add to your signature line for internal and external messages, or even to your resume to make it easier for others to pronounce your name correctly

Scribe

What it does:

Automatically creates a how-to guide, complete with screenshots, instructions and clicks.

What to use it for:

Remote explainers, on-boarding, training, documenting team-wide workflows, and more.

Profile Pic Maker

What it does:

Upload your photo to create a professional-looking profile picture and a matching background cover.

What to use it for:

Updating your LinkedIn profile picture, or on any of your personal & professional social media profiles. Lots of cool backgrounds to choose from.

Get Magical

What it does:

The self-described "best free auto text expander" on Google Chrome.

What to use it for:

An alternate to TextExpander & TextBlaze, this time-saving tool is great for sourcing candidates, updating your ATS, and sending personalized messages that convert.

TextBlaze

What it does:

Saves time and increases quality by automating repeated typing tasks anywhere on the web.

What to use it for:

Create snippets for your email signature, candidate outreach, hiring manager updates, or any other repetitive typing tasks.

Wordtune

What it does:

Wordtune is the ultimate AI writing tool that rewrites and rephrases your writing.

What to use it for:

Not ready for AI to write your entire message? Use this tool to spot check up to 10 sentences a day with the free version.

Nappy

What it does:

Provides beautiful stock photos of Black and Brown people, for free.

What to use it for:

Search for "office" to find photos for blog posts, internal and external presentations, desktop backgrounds, marketing materials, websites, social media, brochures and more.

Omnisend

What it does:

Boosts your email open rates by analyzing and improving your subject lines.

What to use it for:

Refining prospect outreach, subject lines, naming blog posts, crafting memorable internal correspondence, titling reports and more.

⚡ Calm for Chrome

What it does:

Invites you to be mindful and take a deep breath before proceeding to your web destination.

What to use it for: Recharging between meetings & calls, staying grounded, investing in your wellness.

⚡ Papier

What it does:

Simplifies note-taking by being accessible in the browser.

What to use it for:

Capture meeting notes, phone screening notes, or even daily to-do's.

⚡ OpenTabs

What it does:

Transforms the everyday action of opening a new tab into a force of good. They've saved almost 9M trees so far.

What to use it for:

OpenTabs has a small ad in the corner that generates money every time you open a new tab.

I am fascinated by the thought of turning excessive open tabs into a solution for the environment.

Thanks for downloading!

Hopefully, you've learned about at least one new tool that you're excited to add to your tech stack.
